Broadgate Circle

Contractor: Mace
Client: British Land
Architect: Arup Associates

Broadgate Circle is London's latest dining hub, with a diverse collection of restaurants, bars and cafes situated close to Liverpool Street Station.

Working with contractor Mace, Lucas were asked to carry out a toilet fit out which included ceramic tiled walls and floors, suspended ceiling, IPS panels and cubicles, Corian worktops, sanitaryware and the installation of M&E systems throughout.

Lucas was also responsible for the installation of doorsets, ironmongery, drylining throughout the shops and 'back of house' areas, screeding, plastering, fire stopping, raised flooring and decoration to all areas.

One of the highlights of the project was a Hunter Douglas suspended larch timber ceiling using FSC sourced timber, which Lucas Fit Out was responsible for. It covers 75% of the ground level circular soffit, and is a centre-piece of this development.

Morcoe awnings to the front of the shops were supplied by Lucas to match with the bronze anodised facade, and the company's technicians also provided the external texture plastered ceiling walkways.
